

TWO THEORIES IN EXPLOSION WHICH WAS FATAL TO 40

Revenge or Financial Trouble on Part of Garage Owner

West Plains, Mo., April 16—(AP)—Revenge and financial troubles were two motives advanced by Prosecutors here as they pressed their investigation into the cause of the explosion that destroyed a dance hall here last week, killing 40 persons.

Green suggested that J. M. Wiser, 47, who rented a garage below the dance hall, may have been responsible for the blast, either because of pronounced views against dancing or because of financial troubles may have led him to suicide. Wiser, a devout churchman, was killed in the explosion. He had not made public expression of his hatred of dancing here, but at his former home in Alton, Mo., he was known as violently opposed to it.

The prosecutor pointed out also that so far as direct evidence shows, Wiser might have caused the explosion accidentally. He is confident, however, that it was not caused by gasoline fumes, as at first supposed.

Wiser's body, which was exhumed last night, was found in a "dough" for washing automobile parts in the garage twenty minutes before the blast occurred, and that one man claims he saw a sputtering light there—a light that flickered for a few moments and went out just before the building was blown up. Wiser's body was found twenty feet back of the garage.

Coroner Burns held to the theory that Wiser went to the garage, opened the door and struck a match which ignited gasoline fumes.

On the other hand Green pointed out the 50-gallon tank in the garage was found intact and had not been leaking.

No Dynamite

Wiser, however, had purchased five gallons of gasoline to use in a "dough" for washing automobile parts in the garage of the explosion.

No physical evidence of a dynamite explosion, such as a hole in the ground, has been discovered.

Wiser left home at 4 p. m. the day of the explosion, and did not return for the evening meal. His widow said she supposed he had remained downtown although he did not usually return to the garage at night.

The dances held in the hall above the garage were regular Friday evening affairs and were regarded as quite a social event by the residents of this little city since the first was given several months ago. Among the victims were many of the community's prominent persons.

Birger Ill; Sanity Hearing is Delayed

Benton, Ill., April 16—(AP)—The sanity hearing of Charles Birger, former gang leader, who was given a stay of execution the night before his scheduled hanging last Friday, was delayed this morning when the court postponed the hearing until 2 p. m. because of Birger's illness from indigestion.

A physician advised his condition was improving and he would be able to appear in court this afternoon. R. F. Smith, Birger's attorney, indicated a further delay probably would be asked.

Sigmund Bass, St. Louis criminal lawyer, became associated with the defense today, as did C. T. Teague, Benton lawyer. The court room was thronged with curious persons who were disappointed when Birger did not appear this morning.

Seek Peru Hold-up Thugs in This City

Local authorities late Saturday night were asked to try to locate two young men, probably 22 years of age, who about 8:45 held up and robbed a Kroger chain store at Peru and obtained about $300 from the cash register. A Chevrolet sedan, which was reported missing at about the same time, is believed to have been used by the bandit pair in making their escape.

The two answer fairly well the description of two young men for whom local officials searched Friday afternoon and evening when DeKalb police informed Sheriff Ward Miller that they had abandoned a Buick coupe and boarded a west bound NorthWestern freight train which was passing through the city. Both were armed when they entered the store at Peru Saturday night.

A set of license plates was removed from a Ford sedan owned by Ira Leggett Saturday afternoon when the car was parked near Second street on Ottawa avenue. The police are of the opinion that these may have been taken by the same bandits. They were new 1928 license plates bearing numbers 531-890.

Aurora Policeman Shot by Prisoner

Aurora, Ill., April 16—(AP)—Thomas Richardson, 40, an Aurora patrolman, overlooked a small pistol when he searched Delmar Miller, 17, of Bloomington, whom he had arrested for automobile theft, and today he lies near death from an abdomen wound. Miller, too, was wounded in an exchange of shots with the officer last night.

Richardson had apprehended Miller and Francis Houston, 17, also of Bloomington, for the theft of an automobile belonging to Rodney Brandon, primary campaign manager of Louis L. Emerson, and was taking them to the police station when Miller pulled the gun and fired. The policeman fell but was able to shoot at Miller and Houston as they ran.

The patrolman, weakened and staggering, eventually took Miller, also weakened from loss of blood, to the station. Both prisoner and captor collapsed as they faced the Desk Sergeant. Houston still is free.

"ITALIA" FOUGHT WINDS AND STORM THROUGH NIGHT

The Polar Dirigible Lands Near Stolp, Germany, Early this Morn

Stolp, Pomerania, Germany, April 16—(AP)—General Umberto Nobile brought his Polar dirigible Italia through a night of head winds and electrical storms landing at Seddin Airdrome, six miles from here this morning.

It had taken the Italian airship, with which he hopes to explore North Polar regions, thirty hours and 40 minutes to come from Milan, which is about 680 miles from here by air-line.

The only damage suffered by the ship was the tearing of the left stabilizer.

Ten minutes after the motors had been started, the dirigible was over the field. It described a large circle and then reappeared.

When the gondola touched the ground, General Nobile stood at the door of the cabin and beside him his shivering mascot Titania, the dog which flew over the North Pole with him in the Norge. Nobile stepped out and was heartily cheered by the spectators.

In Terrible Storm

"We had a terrible storm over the Carpathian mountains," General Nobile told The Associated Press correspondent, "and I am exceedingly proud of the Italia. She behaved perfectly. I am quite confident the North Pole expedition will be a success."

The Italia was in real danger only during the electrical storm, but I never for a moment thought of turning back. The crew was excellent, the best I ever had."

There were only about a hundred persons at the airdrome to greet the ship besides soldiers, police and newspaper correspondents.

Representatives of the federal, state and local governments welcomed him and tonight there will be a banquet in his honor at the city hall.

The expedition started from Milan, Italy, at 1:55 a. m., Sunday against the advice of German weather observers and some 13 hours later was forced to buck head winds after passing Brunn, Czechoslovakia.

Commander Monico, the naval attaché, who was also surprised that the General had ventured forth in the face of such unfavorable weather predictions, said, "It's just like him, for he has infinite confidence his ship can ride any kind of weather."

Heading northward from Brunn over Silesia, the Italia bucked head winds. At 8:00 p. m. she was sighted over Gleiwitz, some three hundred miles from her destination, which General Nobile had hoped to reach by that hour.

Lost Their Bearings

A series of violent electrical storms caught the airship. The navigators lost their bearings. They apparently drifted westward toward the mountainous Gletsz region. General Nobile sent a wireless message to Lindenberg Observatory, near Berlin, asking whether he had better make an intermediate landing or return to Milan and await better weather.

He was advised to try to cross over the River Oder, as meteorological conditions were more favorable. This was done and three hours after having passed Gleiwitz, the Italia reappeared there.

The airship sent out a rocket as a signal. It was assumed that General Nobile intended to land and hasty preparations were made at Gleiwitz to receive the craft. The Italia maneuvered over the field for half an hour. Then General Nobile signalled he had found his bearings and would continue his flight.

The Italians will be guests of the German government. The expedition will carry only for supplies which they will carry into the north when the Italia sets out for King's Bay, Spitzbergen, where the vessel Citta di Milano will serve as a mobile base.

The hangar at Seddin was completely overhauled at the expense of the German government.

General Nobile has made arrangements to stay in the Polar regions the remainder of spring and the larger part of the summer, operating from King's Bay, from there the numerous exploring expeditions will set out, fan-like, in various directions.

SINCLAIR CASE UNFOLDED THIS MORN BY LAWYER

Government and Oil Man Both Win in Court Rulings

Washington, April 16—(AP)—Declaring he understood some newspaper had published or would publish the deposition of Albert F. Fall before it was introduced in the Sinclair trial, Justice Bailey today said he would consider such action as contempt of court and would take steps to mete out the necessary punishment.

The Washington Herald, a Hearst publication, today published quotations purported to have come from the deposition. The deposition was taken at El Paso because Fall was too ill to come here to testify.

Its transcription was finished today by M. H. Bull, El Paso Commissioner, who took the testimony.

Washington, April 16—(AP)—The defense of Harry F. Sinclair was unfolded today before a jury in the Supreme Court of the district of Columbia, after the government had succeeded in placing in the record of his conspiracy trial evidence surrounding the payment of $25,000 to Albert B. Fall through the First National Bank of El Paso, Texas.

Fall has contended that this money was for expenses on a trip to Russia, which he made for Sinclair, and the defense cross examination of J. E. Benton, an officer of the bank who testified, was brief. The government rested its case shortly afterward.

It was apparent that the defense would emphasize the claim that Teapot Dome was in danger of drainage when Fall leased it to Sinclair. After E. C. Finney, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, and others had given evidence briefly as to technical matters and various executive orders relating to the naval oil reserves, A. C. Veitch, president of the Sinclair Exploration Company, offered a model of the Teapot Dome structure as it existed in 1922.

Owen J. Roberts, government counsel, contended that it would simply be dragging a "herring around regarding the necessity of a lease on Teapot Dome. The indictment, he said, did not object to the leasing but to the manner in which it was granted.

DARING ROBBERY IN TOLEDO ENDS IN COP'S DEATH

Express Safe, Containing $10,000, Loot of Bold Bandits

Toledo, O., April 16—(AP)—Patrolman George Zientara was shot and killed here today during a gun fight with a band of robbers who had held up an American Railway Express Company guarded truck and escaped with three safes containing money and checks said to total $10,000.

The robbers after driving across the city with the three truck guards as prisoners transferred the safes to a waiting automobile. As the transfer was being made, John White, 21, a student at the University of Toledo seeing the men loading the heavy safes into the automobile suspected something was wrong and intervened. He too was made a prisoner.

The robbers then drove to a nearby garage and as they were opening the safes were surprised by Patrolmen Zientara and Biskupski, who had noticed a speeding automobile pass them and gave chase.

Used Machine Gun.

As the policeman entered the garage the robbers opened fire with a machine gun and Zientara fell. Patrolman Biskupski said he was under fire of two machine guns and seeing further resistance would cost him his life dropped as if shot.

Biskupski said the robbers then fired several more rounds at Zientara and then loaded one of the three safes in the officers' car and escaped.

The robbery was staged with the utmost precision.

The robbers forced the truck driver to drive three miles across the city to University Circle, where another automobile was waiting.

It was here that White noticed the men reloading the safes into another automobile.

The three men on the truck and White were freed after the robbers had loaded the safes into their car.

Poor Foundation Caused Dam Break

Washington, April 16—(AP)—Collapse of the St. Francis dam in southern California was attributed to a defective foundation in a report made public today by Dr. Elwood Mead, Commissioner of Reclamation.

Mead headed a committee of engineers which investigated the disaster at the request of the Los Angeles city council.

In connection with the report he said the disaster was not the result of carelessness or criminal negligence.

"It arises in large measure out of the extraordinary obstacles which have confronted the water department of Los Angeles in keeping pace with the needs of the city in its unparalleled growth," Mead declared.

Haversfield maintained his innocence and officials were unable to obtain evidence against him to justify the lodging of other charges. The concealed weapon charge was not pressed when Mercer county authorities consented to his release.

CHICAGO POLICE BESIEGE GOVT. BLDG.; GET MAN

U. S. Dry Agent, Wanted for Shooting is Surrendered

Chicago, April 16—(AP)—Myron M. Caffey, federal prohibition agent, who has been shielded by federal authorities for three weeks after shooting William Beatty, a Municipal Court bailiff, was surrendered to the police today.

Beatty was shot during a raid by prohibition agents on a west side saloon, and the affair resulted in a clash between local and federal authorities.

Demands of the police for his surrender were ignored and for the last two days Caffey ate and slept in the Federal Building, city officials being warned he could not be arrested there.

Building Besieged

A constant vigil was maintained outside the building, however, to see that the agent did not leave.

It was decided today to end the vigil by surrendering Caffey and he was turned over to Captain William Schoemaker.

The prohibition agent was placed in a cell, preparatory to a formal charge of assault with intent to kill being placed against him.

In the meanwhile John E. Northup, Assistant United States District Attorney, took action to obtain a writ of habeas corpus to transfer the case to federal jurisdiction.

AN EARLIER REPORT

Chicago, April 16—(AP)—A scrap of paper calling for the arrest of one Myron Caffey, a federal prohibition agent, was getting itself all dirty from disuse today in the pocket of Police Captain William Schoemaker.

It wasn't that Capt. Schoemaker didn't know where Caffey was. He did. But circumstances made service of the warrant a ticklish proposition; one might almost say a matter of national moment.

Caffey was in the federal building. He appeared happy and contented, possibly a bit more so than the police who stood in the biting wind outside waiting to arrest him.

But if the police style was cramped by circumstances, so was Caffey's. He virtually was besieged, for should he step from government property, the police were there to serve the warrant charging him with the attempted murder of William Beatty, a Municipal Court Bailiff, who was wounded the night of March 29 during a prohibition raid.

Captain Schoemaker's trouble was that he was under conflicting instructions, one instruction was to serve the warrant. The other was to keep off government property.

"This property," said a government official to Schoemaker, in effect, "is as sacred as an Indian reservation. Set foot here, and take the consequences."

Eight officers guarded exits of the federal building. Caffey very nearly was caught yesterday when, unaware of the police lines around the federal building, he ran jauntily down the steps on his way to a nearby lunchroom. Before he had gone far, however, he observed Captain Schoemaker approaching him with speed and determination, whereupon he sprinted back to the haven provided by the United States government.

Since that time Caffey has been eating off a tray, food being carried to him by sympathetic fellow agents. A couch in the District Attorney's office has been placed at his disposal.

Duffy Case May Go to Jury Tomorrow

(Telegraph Special Service)

Cedar Rapids, Ia., April 16—George Claassen, chief of counsel for John W. Duffy of Dixon, Ill., on trial here on a perjury charge, is expected to close his arguments to the jury about 3 o'clock this afternoon, and he will be followed by County Prosecutor W. J. Barngrover, who will close for this state. The jury may get the case this evening, but it is considered likely this will not happen until Tuesday morning.

Court did not open until 10 o'clock this morning, at which time Claassen started his argument, which he had not half completed when Judge John T. Moffitt recessed at noon. The defense attorney during his argument read the names of the jurors who had acquitted Duffy of complicity in the robbery of the Alburnett bank, and scored heavily when it became known that members of the present jury were jurors of the former trial.

Lindbergh Springs Surprise Landings

Denver, April 16—(AP)—Flying his new cabin monoplane, which carried him to Denver from the Grand Canyon yesterday, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off again this morning without announcing his destination. He nosed his craft southeastward.

Colonel Lindbergh was unaccompanied. Aviators at Lowry Field believed he would fly to another airport in this vicinity where a longer runway would enable him to take off with his companions, Harold Gribby and Harry Hall Knight of St. Louis.

Denver, Colo., April 16—(AP)—Ability of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh to land his new monoplane about where and when he pleases on his eastward "vacation flight" across this rugged western country, has added hundreds of erstwhile anxious persons to his list of admirers.

While scores of volunteers have rushed to his assistance at various times since he left California last week, an unannounced destination, he arrived yesterday to indicate he considered the trip thus far virtually without incident.

Tests of the new ship and his desire to keep it perfectly "tuned" has provided most of the thrills. After causing scores of motorists to hurry to the air field at Williams, Ariz., Friday last when he arrived after nightfall from the west to drop down smoothly by the aid of his landing lights and flares, he caused another near stampede Saturday by bringing his ship to earth in a rough section near there.

When motorists sped to the scene they found a note in the window of the plane which read "gone to lunch."

The famous pilot was found at a nearby ranch house enjoying a lunch furnished by an incredulous rancher who for sometime refused to believe he was host to Lindbergh. Anxiety was dispelled when the Colonel explained he merely was seeking a larger landing place than was available at Williams to permit taking off with a full load of fuel. He then demonstrated the ground he selected could be used as an emergency field by taking off for Grand Canyon where he spent the night.

PROPHETS

A prophet. Journeying where vast prairies are. Looked up and hailed a mountain from afar.

"Thou ancient Immobility," he cried, "Pray which of these, thinkest thou, the greatest prize?"

The sun's high noon, when thy somber side

Is bathed in streams of gold and there arise

Above thy brow the canopies of kings?

The closing day, whose colored banners touch

Those old, cold rocks and each, in passing, flings

Its sapphires, amethysts and pearls in such

Profusion as no monarch's vault has seen?

The full moon's open reticule, which pours

An avalanche of richest silver sheen

Adown thy shadowed bulk where darkness dwells

Its mystery? Or dost thou more prefer

A scarlet autumn robe, or winter's white.

Or springtime's new green veil of gossamer?

Aloud and calm, thus spake the tranquil height:

"Why, none of these surpassing seems to me

As days wing by and seasons come and go.

A greater prize by far I hold to be Serenity."

Then bowed the prophet low.

"Majestic Sage," quoth he, "I, too, must own

To deep, still, placid seasons I have known."

"Yea friend," the mount replied, "and this be true,

Thou art, indeed, a very mountain too."

A prophet

Thoughtfully turned back across the plain.

Still, in those steep, a prophet doth remain.

Henry Edison Williams.

National Congress of D. A. R. Now Open

Washington, April 16—(AP)—With President Coolidge heading his list of speakers for the first night session, the Daughters of the American Revolution assembled here today for their 37th Continental Congress amid much uncertainty whether the recent national defense controversy would be injected into the meeting.

Although the Congress' blacklisting of certain national speakers, regarded by it as undesirable, and its support of the Naval building bill, which led to much publicity on the part of opposition members, were not on the program for discussion, the way was open for precipitating the issue on the floor by any member who desired to attack the stand taken by the national officers.

The general subject of national defense will be touched upon by several speakers before the Congress, including Secretary of War Davis, who talks tonight on "preparedness."

Mrs. Brousseau dwelt on it herself in her address prepared for delivery in opening the Congress by restating its defense program.

"Do not be deceived by the smoke screen that national defense is politics with which this organization should have no concern," she said in urging the women of the country to acquire a "thorough knowledge of great international issues."

The Daughters of the American Revolution, she added, "share the hope of all reasonable citizens for an ultimate world peace." If Secretary Kellogg and Premier Briand succeed in their anti-war treaty plan, she said, "they will go down in history as the two greatest men of the age."

Artist Delighted All at Women's Club Meet

The talented artist Miss Marian O'Conner from the Columbia School of Music, Chicago, was greeted Saturday, with a splendid audience in spite of the unexpected wintry snowstorm. There were ninety-four present, members of the Dixon Woman's Club and their guests.

Miss O'Conner was introduced in a few gracious words by Mrs. C. C. Rorick, chairman of the Music department after which the former gracefully came forward to greet her audience.

A pleasing personality, laughing, expressive Irish eyes, a lovely contralto voice possessing an even quality, suitable selections and beautiful costumes, created an atmosphere that held the interest of all in her hour of song recital.

Her opening group consisted of three American songs, "Dream Depths" by Henry J. Pomar; "Quiet" by Wilfred Sanderson; and "Awakening" by Goldie.

Dressed in Oriental costume she sang three Oriental selections, "You Are All That is Lovely" by Pindar; "Oriental Romance" by Korsakou; "Emperor" by Bantock.

The Spanish group followed and consisted of Mexican Folk songs. Here she appeared in a very becoming Spanish costume and sang: "La Golondrina", "La Paloma Blanca"; "Little Star" (Estrellita).

In Indian costume she gave her closing group: "Doe Skin Blanket," Cadman; "Spring Song" from the American opera—Shanewis.

She was accompanied by Mrs. Morrill.

Miss O'Conner's recital was one of intense pleasure from first to last and every one present was glad to have the opportunity of listening to this charmingly modest and fascinating singer. The guests were glad to greet Miss O'Conner after her recital and thank her for the pleasure she had thus afforded.

The artist was assisted by Mrs. Nina McGinnis, who in her pleasing way gave several readings that received hearty applause. It is a pleasure to hear from our own talented club members and to know that they are always ready to so graciously respond as was Mrs. McGinnis.

Dainty refreshments were served in the dining room, where Mesdames Marcroft, Richardson, Jarvis, Hobbs, George, Coppins and Miss Edna Dicker served as hostesses. To add to a delightful social hour (by special request) Miss O'Conner sang two short numbers closing an enjoyable afternoon.

Delighted With Plans Texas Club Women

Washington, D. C., Apr. 16—"I am gratified and delighted with the plans of the club women of Texas for the forthcoming convention of the General Federation of Women's Clubs," said Mrs. John D. Sherman, president of the General Federation on her arrival in Washington from the west and south, where, according to custom, she visited the convention city of San Antonio and conferred with the chairman of the local Biennial Board, Mrs. Henry Drought.

The local Biennial Board is made up of the leading club women of Texas who have established reputations for efficiency and willingness to give loyal service in the great cause of organized womanhood as exemplified by the General Federation of Women's Clubs. I was assured by scores of women that every effort was being put forth to make this the best convention ever held by the General Federation.

"Without doubt the municipal auditorium, where the convention is to be held, is the best adapted to our needs of any meeting place we have ever had. I was assured that the use of amplifiers will not be necessary and, after trying it out, I believe this is true. The building is ideally arranged for the meeting of small groups and for exhibit purposes. In addition to this the auditorium of the Y. W. C. A. which is opposite the Auditorium, has been engaged by the department of Education for the school of methods in adult education which will be conducted by Mrs. Elizabeth C. Morris, a nationally known authority on this subject, of Asheville, N. C.

"A delightful innovation is being introduced by the Local Biennial Board in its arrangements for the reception to be held in honor of the General Federation. This will be held outdoors in the plaza in front of the Auditorium, which will be flooded with light. The program for the opening session, which is essentially a Texas program, but is largely prescribed by precedent, will include addresses of welcome by the chairman of the Local Biennial Board, the president of the State Federation, the Mayor of the city and a representative of the local Chamber of Commerce. To these addresses the president of the Federation will respond, and there will be musical numbers.

"Mrs. Drought entertained at her home with a tea, during my visit, for members of the local Biennial Board, and the City Federation of San Antonio gave a luncheon on the roof of the Plaza hotel, which gave opportunity for me to meet more than 300 of the club leaders of the convention city. This was a delightful affair, full of cordiality and friendliness. I have always noticed in my travels in all parts of the country that in no section is there as much made of the children as in the southern states. Convention programs and other gatherings never fail to include some interesting feature by children and this time was no exception. Six little girls, each dressed to represent one of the nations whose flag at one time floated over the now state of Texas, presented a little pageant, a verse of explanation was read by one of the club women and each child carried the flag of the nation, later presenting the flag to me as a souvenir of the occasion. The park commissioner sent me lovely flowers and I was also presented with a framed picture of the beautiful doorway of the Mission conception de Acuna."

DIXON'S NEW AIRPORT.

The Chamber of Commerce of this city is to be congratulated on its enterprise in arranging for a government landing field for airplanes at Dixon, and Mr. Joseph Crawford, whose co-operation with the Chamber of Commerce has simplified the financing of the project is to be especially commended his public spirit.

The landing field, which will have two runways 2,000 feet long and 500 feet wide, one east and west and the other north and south, over smooth and level ground, is directly on the Lincoln Highway and at the edge of the city.

The Chamber of Commerce is starting the season with its first "home run." Accomplishment counts and the cinching of a landing field in Dixon is a real accomplishment.

FESS DELIVERS KEYNOTE ADDRESS.

Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio has been chosen to deliver the keynote address as temporary chairman of the republican national convention in Kansas City. The choice will be satisfactory to the administration and probably was the result of influence by Chairman Butler of Massachusetts. Senator Fess has been one of the principal spokesmen of opponents of farm legislation promoted from the west. He was the original drafter of Coolidge. He was talking about it before political leaders began using the proposal as a means of dodging alignment with candidates in the field. The president even felt called upon to tell him that his talk was embarrassing to the White House.

In the field of education before he entered congress, Mr. Fess was vice president of Ohio Northern university, a member of the faculty of Chicago university, and finally president of Antioch college in Ohio. He was elected to the house of representatives in 1912, was chairman of the republican congressional campaign committee in 1918, and became a senator in 1923.

Death of Senator Willis left Ohio without a presidential candidate, opening the way for selection of Senator Fess for the temporary chairmanship.

THE COST OF SELLING.

What are the factors involved in a rise or fall in the prices of the things you buy?

There are a good many, some of them rather involved. The Department of Commerce believes that the act of selling is in itself too costly. It has just made a survey of a large retail establishment in which it found that only 42 per cent of each salesperson's time was taken up in the actual selling of goods.

"The selling problem must be approached a scientific angle, with an accurate knowledge of all the facts involved," says a department report. "Any substantial advance in retail selling efficiency . . . will prove of advantage not only to the merchant, but, in the long run, to his employees and customers as well."

JUSTICE THAT HAPPENS.

Sometimes there is a sort of rough justice in the course of events, after all.

Ohio recently sent three notorious murderers to prison. Each was a gunman of the worst type; in each case a sentimental jury refused to vote the death penalty but agreed on a wholly inadequate prison term.

But these three murderers, not satisfied with that, tried, at different times, to escape from prison. And each was shot to death in the attempt.

Sometimes, after all, the course of events bring a kind of rough justice.

An English woman who has twenty-five (25) children, cooks and runs a general store. Too bad the British unemployment situation is what it is; her husband might be able to find an outside job of some kind for her spare time.

A London newspaper says the prince falls off his horse so often because of crowding, hysterical women on the race courses. We'll believe it if the newspaper will explain how it happens the prince never falls off a dance floor.

A New York church sexton who found his salary insufficient took up bootlegging on the side. No matter what you take up these days, you must have good background to get along.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY MAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KNICK

The Tiniyes eyed the funny man and right up to him they all ran. He really seemed quite friendly, and the Tiniyes weren't afraid. "Well, who are you?" weee Coppy said. "And where'd you get that wooden head? I'll bet right in some work shop is the place where you were made."

"You're right," replied their new friend. "I'm made of wood, but I can bend. If it were not for being square, I'd be just like a man. Course I can do a lot of things that men can't do. I have big wings. No man I've ever known could fly, but look at me, I can!"

"You bet you can. We've seen you fly," said Scouty. "way up in sky. I wish that we could fly like that. I know right where we'd go. You see, a bird flew down on us and promptly started quite a fuss. He took poor Clowny with him. Where they've gone we do not know."

"If we could fly, we'd take to air and start in searching everywhere, until we found the monstrous bird that took our little friend. The search would be real hard, no doubt, but I feel sure that we'd find out just where the big bird flew to. Then we'd lend a helping hand."

"So, that's your trouble," said the man. "Well, I will help you, if I can. It isn't nice to lose a friend. No wonder you feel bad. Now do just as I say and then we may find Clowny" they would. No one bothered. They just dropped down like hieroglyphic figures after the comfortable chairs and divans were taken. Such a crowd. Strange for a person like Michello to overstock his place with people but I think there were a lot of friends with his guests that weren't expected.

After Madam Nobilatshevski's singing and the buffet supper we had an impromptu show. I think I made a hit with my imitation of Ann Pennington doing the Black Bottom. Up to this time I hadn't attracted much attention. Michello came over and said he'd like to sketch me in a dance pose. I'm to go back Tuesday. Florence is a little sore about it but why should she care? she's going home soon and won't see any more of Michello anyhow.

Maybe you'd like to hear what he served for supper. You can try it on the sewing circle. Caviar, of course, red and black, and his sandwiches were all open-faced, cut in fancy shapes. Very tiny and of many kinds. Someone said they're served that way abroad. They certainly are attractive, and you know at a glance what they are—maybe. Minced stuff, mostly chicken, egg, cheese, fish and mixtures. All had very small decorative motifs on them, done in cutout vegetables, parsley, capers, etc. It must have taken a lot of time to make them but as they were just about too pretty to eat Michello probably saved in the end.

I'll make some for you when I come out. You can tell Betty I'll stay two weeks with Clyde while she is in the hospital if they can't afford to hire someone, but I do hope it won't be soon because I've got some plans of my own for the near future.

Darling love,
MARYE.

PEOPLE'S COLUMN

AN OPPORTUNITY FOR ALERT YOUNG AMERICANS

This summer 35,000 young Americans will have an opportunity to attend the Citizens' Military Training Camps to be held in many different parts of the country. There they will live a wholesome, out-of-doors life and will receive training which will equip them not only to defend their country in time of war, but which will better fit them, physically, morally and mentally, to serve as good citizens in time of peace. That is real, practical Americanism.

If the opportunities of the C. M. T. C. were generally understood there would be such a rush of candidates that many times the number that can be accommodated would be enrolled and elimination tests would have to be instituted or the camp capacity enlarged. Think of it—thirty days of jolly camp life at the government's expense; thirty days of priceless training and of rip-roaring outdoor sports, topped off by big, wholesome meals which build up health and muscle. And entertainment at night, the trip to the camp and back home again free, and even uniforms furnished free. Many well-to-do families pay hundreds of dollars to send their boys to summer camps which offer no more opportunities.

No obligation for further military service is attached to attendance at the camps—no obligation of any kind. The government is satisfied to train young men for a month as a worthwhile investment in good citizenship. The basic camps are open to young men between the ages of 17 and 24 who are physically fit and of good moral character. Ages for the advanced camps run up to 31 years. Graduates from the advance camps have an opportunity to qualify for commissions in the Officers Reserve Corps.

Here are some of the things the camps do. They give the young men knowledge of how to care for themselves in camp. They inculcate habits of accuracy, obedience to constituted authority, snap, thoroughness and promptness. They give sex morality courses and courses in the duties of citizenship. They teach leadership and teamwork. They give a strong lesson in democracy by placing the poor boy and the rich boy side by side in a way in which each learns to respect the other for what he is worth. They urge attendance at the church of the boy's faith on Sunday.

But you will make a soldier of my boy—if he is trained he will be the first called in case of war, some mothers will object. Nothing to that. In time of war every physically fit American of military age is subject to military service and has to go when his number is called whether trained or untrained. The graduates of the C. M. T. C. would be called no more quickly than the boy who has never attended camp.

Attendance at camp, however, would make this difference in time of war: The boy who has C. M. T. C. training will have a fifty percent better chance of getting back home with a whole skin than the boy who hasn't, because he will know better how to take care of himself. The history of the A. E. F. shows that the untrained replacements suffered fifty percent heavier casualties than the trained men in the same units, the trained men coming through places where the untrained men went down. So instead of placing a boy in more danger from war, the C. M. T. C. actually reduces his chances of becoming a war casualty by half.

And there is no militarism about the camps. The boys are taught the truth about war. They are taught what a terrible thing it is to have to go to war, but they are also taught, that if they ever do have to go, it will be a great deal more comfortable to go prepared.

The camps begin this year in June after the close of school and run in thirty day periods through August. Boys are already enrolling for them, in fact the applications started to come in immediately after the close of the camps last year. County representatives of the Secretary of War have been appointed in every county in the United States to handle the enrollment of candidates.

PRESIDENTIAL PORTRAITS

The Story of Herbert Hoover

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the last of four articles describing Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, and the seventh in a series of Presidential Campaign Portraits written for The Telegraph and NEA Service by Robert Talley. Tomorrow will begin the story of Governor Al Smith.

BY ROBERT TALLEY NEA Service Writer

Washington, April 16.—The spring of 1927 saw the worst flood in the history of the Mississippi valley. Six hundred and fifty thousand people were homeless, barns and houses were floating down toward the Gulf, crumbling levees had chased thousands to the refuge camps on high grounds, crops were ruined, everything was lost and disease stalked in the wake of grim desolation.

Into the crisis, President Coolidge sent Herbert Hoover as director of relief forces. The man who had fed and clothed hungry and shivering Europe went among his own people on a similar mission.

Hoover wasted no time. Even before he left Washington, the telegraph and telephone wires were humming.

How many tents did the army have? Fine! Send 40,000 of them to such and such cities. Get 100,000 more ready for use when called for. Send every available cot to cities like Memphis and Vicksburg. Ship 200,000 army blankets. Commandeer all small boats, barges and the like. Select sites on high ground for refuge camps. Set up telephones, telegraphs and radios. Summon every doctor and nurse available. See that every refugee in every camp is inoculated against typhoid and vaccinated against small pox. Get the army engineers busy designing those camps so they will be sanitary. Get clothing, food supplies, medicine, mosquito netting. Buy everything possible in the flood zone so as to steady the markets there as much as possible.

Such was Hoover on the eve of his departure for New Orleans.

The story of that heroic fight is too fresh in the minds of readers to require repetition here, but it might be well to show how Hoover went about it.

He described the task thus: "The first thing to consider at all costs is to get all of those people out of danger. They must be rescued whether they want it or not.

"Next, they must all be got into camps. They must be fed and clothed and inoculated so there will be no epidemics.

"Third we'll have to get them back into their old jobs and on their own farms and plantations. We must get livestock for them and see that they get their crops replanted.

"Fourth, we must organize credit for them. They've got to be financed."

And thus Hoover tackled the gigantic task with the typically analytical mind of an engineer.

At the end of a long day's work of rescue, Hoover would retire into whatever happened to be serving as his office at the time—a Pullman compartment, a stateroom on a river steamer, a railway smoking room or whatnot—and begin planning the next step.

"What can these people plant in this area after June 15 and still harvest?" he would ask. "What can they grow to help feed their cattle and mules, if they have any left?"

Men familiar with the south would explain. Then Hoover would resume: "I want to know the amount of seed needed in each package to provide for a family of five. Larger families can have two packages. Telegraph all the agricultural colleges and nurseries in this part of the country to start plants right now so they can be transplanted when the flood recedes—a million heads of cabbage—a million tomato plants—and so it went, day after day, night after night.

The nation responded nobly to the Red Cross appeal, the government sent airplanes and supplies, states loaned their troops, the American Legion volunteered its services, the Red Cross doctors and nurses came, army engineers looked after camp sanitation, trainloads of food and clothing poured in. And so Hoover moved toward the consummation of the big task that lay before him.

Hoover's efficiency was not of the impersonal kind. Once a soldier entered a railway car where Hoover was studying a map and asked:

"What are we going to do with all those dogs, sir?"

"What dogs?" asked Hoover.

The soldier explained that many of the refugees had brought their dogs to the camps with them, and some had even brought cats.

"Take good care of them," said Hoover, promptly. "These people haven't saved much. If any of them have pets let them keep them and take care of them. Some of the refugees can build kennels for them."

The soldier hesitated.

Some of 'em have got canaries, too," he said.

"Order some bird seed with the rest of these supplies and charge it to me," Hoover said, turning to his secretary.

There are thousands of negroes in the Mississippi delta who believe that Hoover is president today. Didn't he come down from Washington?

Once a relief worker was trying to convince an old negro preacher in Mississippi that Hoover was merely secretary of commerce.

"Well, hit's all de same, ain't it?" the old negro asked.

In Arkansas once an old negro, after hearing Hoover speak, approached him and said: "Ah's always wanted to meet yuh, Mistah Lowden!"

The rich and the poor, the humble and the proud had suffered alike. The water that ruined the oil paintings in the home of a rich plantation owner and laid waste to his crops, likewise drove the negro tenant farmer from his 40 acres and perhaps drowned his mule. Hoover aided all impartially.

The Mississippi valley flood is history now, but the memory of what Hoover did there is one of the chief reasons for his popularity as a presidential candidate. Yet, he has never sought to capitalize this.

The record in which Hoover takes most pride is in having made a big job out of a little one at the Department of Commerce. By intensive and extensive organization, he had reached out to get foreign trade for America and today the United States' foreign trade is 35 per cent above pre-war level, even after the depreciation of the dollar has been deducted.

He has saved millions for American industry by standardization, eliminating odd and needless sizes in many products by agreement. Measures to eliminate waste have saved many more millions. As a building aid, he has initiated the Better Homes movement in 4000 communities of the United States. He has promoted employment by co-ordinating seasonal activities, engineered a radio treaty with the nations of the world and done much to promote commercial aviation.

Steadily, the secretary of commerce has gone about his task of organizing the business of a nation and into this government activity he has put his tireless energy and ability as an engineer.

The Hoover day begins at 8 a. m. when his bureau chiefs take breakfast with him at his home and plan the day over eggs and coffee. He is at his office promptly at 9 o'clock. There is an hour's intermission for lunch at the Cosmopolitan Club at noon. And then he goes back to his desk, which he seldom leaves before 7 or 7:30 p. m.

And so ends the story of Herbert Hoover, a tireless, capable genius for organization and efficiency whose fame spans the world—but just about the weakest politician that Washington ever saw.

NEXT: The story of Al Smith.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, Sunday, April 15.

The Golden Text was from I John 2:24, "If thou shalt love the Lord, the beginning shall remain in you, ye also shall continue in the Son, and in the Father."

Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "And what agreement hath the temple of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them, and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you." (II Cor. 6:16, 17).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "If the disciple is advancing spiritually, he is striving to enter in. He constantly turns away from material sense, and looks towards the imperishable things of Spirit" (p. 21).

At the end of a long day's work of rescue, Hoover would retire into whatever happened to be serving as his office at the time—a Pullman compartment, a stateroom on a river steamer, a railway smoking room or whatnot—and begin planning the next step.

"What can these people plant in this area after June 15 and still harvest?" he would ask. "What can they grow to help feed their cattle and mules, if they have any left?"

Men familiar with the south would explain. Then Hoover would resume: "I want to know the amount of seed needed in each package to provide for a family of five. Larger families can have two packages. Telegraph all the agricultural colleges and nurseries in this part of the country to start plants right now so they can be transplanted when the flood recedes—a million heads of cabbage—a million tomato plants—and so it went, day after day, night after night.

The nation responded nobly to the Red Cross appeal, the government sent airplanes and supplies, states loaned their troops, the American Legion volunteered its services, the Red Cross doctors and nurses came, army engineers looked after camp sanitation, trainloads of food and clothing poured in. And so Hoover moved toward the consummation of the big task that lay before him.

Hoover's efficiency was not of the impersonal kind. Once a soldier entered a railway car where Hoover was studying a map and asked:

"What are we going to do with all those dogs, sir?"

"What dogs?" asked Hoover.

The soldier explained that many of the refugees had brought their dogs to the camps with them, and some had even brought cats.

"Take good care of them," said Hoover, promptly. "These people haven't saved much. If any of them have pets let them keep them and take care of them. Some of the refugees can build kennels for them."

The soldier hesitated.

Some of 'em have got canaries, too," he said.

"Order some bird seed with the rest of these supplies and charge it to me," Hoover said, turning to his secretary.

There are thousands of negroes in the Mississippi delta who believe that Hoover is president today. Didn't he come down from Washington?

Once a relief worker was trying to convince an old negro preacher in Mississippi that Hoover was merely secretary of commerce.

"Well, hit's all de same, ain't it?" the old negro asked.

In Arkansas once an old negro, after hearing Hoover speak, approached him and said: "Ah's always wanted to meet yuh, Mistah Lowden!"

FLETCHERIZING
Many of you have practiced chewing your food at least thirty times before swallowing it. Health teachers all over the world have been teaching people to masticate more thoroughly. Horace Fletcher taught the layman through various books the necessity for masticating food well, and his name has gone down in history as the foremost exponent of the art of chewing. The word "Fletcherize" is now in all standard dictionaries.
The chemical action taking place in the mouth is this: The digestive fluid of the mouth contains a ferment or enzyme called "ptyalin" which has the chemical power to change starch into sugar or maltose. Only five per cent of the entire starch digestion takes place in the mouth, but this is the most important part of the digestion, and is equal in many ways to the other ninety-five per cent which takes place in the small intestines. If the starch is properly mixed with the saliva it is changed just enough so that when the starch passes through the stomach it is not harmed by the gastric juice.
Starch must be digested by an alkaline ferment, and the acid of the stomach only interferes with this digestion. Consequently, if the starch is somewhat changed before it reaches the stomach, the stomach acid will not have so pronounced an effect upon it.
There is no doubt but what if food is enjoyed it will digest more readily, and be assimilated more completely. When food is chewed properly a finer flavor will be noted, as the starch in the food is changed to maltose and consequently that food will be more relished.
One of the greatest objections to cooked foods is that they encourage hasty swallowing, whereas, with the raw foods it is necessary to masticate them thoroughly or they cannot be swallowed with comfort.
If you completely masticate your food you will find that you will eat less. Many digestive troubles will be overcome by this simple practice of mastication, which will cut down the quantity of food.
Mastication should be practiced diligently if only to give the teeth exercise, as the blood will not circulate in the gums well unless they are properly used. The organic salts and vitamins will likewise be extracted from the food more readily, and furnish material for the building of good strong teeth.
Be sure and chew melons and fruit as well as you do any other kind of food, because these foods contain a good deal of sugar and require mixture with the saliva.
Milk must also be well masticated, and each swallow should be churned about in the mouth before it is swallowed. Then let it just trickle down the throat, a few drops at a time. Otherwise you will find that air is swallowed along with the milk.
To play safe, take plenty of time to eat a small amount of food at each meal. It is folly to hurry through a meal in five minutes, and then spend hours complaining about the indigestion produced.

HOW CATARRH IS PRODUCED
An acute case of catarrh manifests itself in two stages. First, there is the dry, congested, swollen mucous membrane. Then the mucous membrane suddenly becomes moist with abnormally free discharge of mucus which is more or less altered in quality. Extreme inflammation of the membrane exists, whether it is in the nose, or throat, or any of the other mucous membranes of the body. This acute inflammation is usually called a "cold," especially if the inflammation is in the nose or throat.
The irritating cause of the discharge may be the breathing of fine particles of dust or the pollen from flowers, or often the invasion of bacteria. However, it is almost impossible for one of these "colds" to start unless the person who contracts the cold has been enervated for some time and his resistance to disease is therefore below par.
Where chronic catarrh exists, the mucous membranes are constantly throwing out excesses of mucus containing epithelial cells, white blood cells, and organic mineral matter. This discharge may be present in the air passages, such as the nose, throat or lungs, or may even come from the stomach or alimentary canal, with discharges from the rectum. Even excessive discharges of mucus from the genital organs can be placed under the name of catarrh.

The fundamental cause lying back of any of these types of chronic catarrh are always an excess accumulation in the blood of too large a quantity of material formed from the carbohydrates, that is, the sugars and starches such as white flour, sugar, cornstarch, polished rice, etc. These are all acid-forming, and consequently lower the alkalinity of the blood.
Most commercial sugars are so deprived of their alkalinity that they are also acid-forming, and have the effect of producing in the blood a lowered state of alkalinity.
These effete materials, of no use to the body, must be thrown out in some manner, and the body often uses the mucous membrane as a channel for this elimination.
If one is suffering from any form of chronic catarrh, the first thing to do is to eliminate, for a time at least, all sugars and starches, and give the blood a chance to cleanse itself of these waste products which cannot be used in the building of normal cell structure.
The body will quickly eliminate these unnecessary wastes if one will only give his system a chance to carry on this elimination in an uninterrupted manner. If short fruit fasts are taken occasionally the body will then have a chance to throw out this morbid material, and the blood will once again regain its normal tone.
It is a wise plan, also, to stimulate all the other eliminative organs of the body, such as the skin, kidneys, intestines, etc. Large quantities of water should be taken between meals a good sweat induced each day, and it is a good plan to take, for sometime at least, one enema daily.
It will take considerable time to bring about a complete cure, and one must be patient with these treatments and stay on a rigid diet if a permanent and lasting cure is desired.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Question—A. H. G. writes: "Kindly advise if there is a cure for neuritis of about five years' standing, where patient's limbs are disabled on account of cartilage having hardened in the joints. If there is no absolute cure, would a strict fast and diet relieve the awful suffering. Would a warm climate be of benefit in preference to cold winters in Minnesota?"
Answer—The patient you ask about is probably suffering from arthritis. I have never seen a case that cannot be cured as far as relieving the pains is concerned even though the extra deposit of calcium in the joints cannot be entirely removed. Warm climate encourages a greater amount of skin elimination, but there is no reason why arthritis or any type of rheumatism cannot be cured in a cold climate, providing the patient uses the proper amount of skin washing and encourages elimination through certain hydrotherapy treatments.
Question—Mrs. O. J. S. writes: "Ever since your diet lessons appeared in the paper I have felt better following them. I have been and still am overweight but am slowly reducing. I wish to know if the genuine wholewheat bread is fattening. Also rye bread?"
Answer—Any bread may be considered "fattening."
Question—Puzzled writes: "When impurities from cigarette tobacco are deposited in the lungs by inhaling, do they remain there or are they eventually carried away by the blood?"
Answer—The tarry deposits from the inhaling of cigarette smoke are gradually carried away through the lymphatic circulation, but of course, may have remained for a long enough time to have done harm.
Question—J. H. H. asks: "Does persistent use of city chlorinated water which is also hard lead to hardening of the arteries, and is it injurious to the eyes?"
Answer—I do not believe there is any harm in the use of chlorinated water from the city water supply. I do not know of any kind of water which is fit for drinking purposes that will have any effect on producing hardening of arteries, or which will injure the eyes.
Question—M. J. C. writes: "You frequently state that starch and sugar are not necessities. Will you please explain more about this. Many doctors claim they are necessary."
Answer—I have written many articles on this subject and will be glad to send you some of these if you will send me your name and address. Space does not permit me to answer you at length on this subject.
Question—"Thanks" asks: "Could you tell me what I could do for my voice? For the past two years it has been failing and is almost gone. I am very nervous."
Answer—The trouble may be entirely from lack of flexibility of the diaphragm which is a flat muscle separating the chest from the abdomen. This muscle controls breathing, so when it is paralyzed or its action interfered with, it is impossible to use the voice or even to breathe. Of course, the trouble with your voice may be entirely caused from a disease of the throat or of the vocal cords, then—You should see a throat specialist and have him diagnose your case.

LETTER GOLF

DON'T FALL OVERBOARD
You don't have to paddle far to go from RIVER to LAKES—par is only four, but it's a tricky, treacherous trip and you may find it difficult to achieve the par solution on page 7.

R	I	V	E	R

THE RULES
1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2—You can change only one letter at a time.
3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each pump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4—The order of letters cannot be changed.
One solution is printed on page 7.

Second Drigible Mast in Illinois. Belleville, Ill.—(AP)—The country's second aerial harbor for dirigibles has been completed at Scott Field, and the German and English air liners, the LZ-127 and R-100, expected to sail across the sea this summer, will be invited to tie up at it. Col. John A. Paegelow, commandant at Scott Field, will invite the builders to bring the dirigibles to Scott Field, the only army field in the United States for lighter-than-air craft. This mast and the one at Navy Field, Lakehurst, N. J., are considered the only ones in the country capable of holding the large ships with safety. The noses of the ships may be attached to the mast, the great bags riding out in the wind like a weather-vane. Passengers on dirigibles moored to the mast may leave their ships by way of the "catwalk," an interior runway extending to the nose of the big vessel. Here a door opens onto a "gangplank," which permits them to alight on the tip of the mast and make their way to the ground in an elevator. A huge hangar also is available at Scott Field, where a dirigible may be stowed away in case of inclement weather.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

SALLY FORD, ward of the state orphanage from the time she is four, is "dressed" to CLEM CARSON the summer she is 16 and meets DAVID NASH, athlete and student who is working on the Carson farm during the summer. David becomes enraged when Carson makes insulting remarks about the student's intimate friendship with Sally and strikes the farmer a terrific blow. Sally and David run away and join a carnival. David is disguised as "Princess Lalla," a girl gazer.

NITA, Italia dancer, who knows the police are after Sally and David, tells Sally she will expose her if she doesn't keep "chance off" David. Nita admits shamelessly she is infatuated with the boy.

In Capital City, Sally soon forgets her fears under her successful guise as the crystal gazer. She is confused one afternoon by a handsome, well-dressed Easterner who tentatively insists on reading her fortune in the crystal. He stays in the background of the crowd with his eyes constantly on her. However, Sally forgets him when she sees all of her little friends, the inmates of the orphanage, troop into her tent.

Wondering where the "good angel" to the orphans when she spies a woman with them. Suddenly she is faced with a look of andness in her eyes. Sally is jerked suddenly from her contemplation of the lovely woman by the words of one of the children: "That's not Princess Lalla. It's Sally Ford, play-acting."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY. CHAPTER XXV. FOR a terrible moment, long enough for Gus, the Barker, to jump from Jan's platform and come toward her on a run, Sally sat frozen with terror. She felt that Betsey's keen eyes had stripped her of her brown makeup, of her fantastic clothes, of the protecting black lace veil, so that anyone who looked at her could see that she was indeed "Just Sally Ford, play-acting."

She wanted to rise from her gilded chair and run for her life—and David's—but she had lost all control of her muscles. Betsey was still clinging to her, her babyish hands shaking the slender shoulders under the green satin jacket, when Gus bounded upon the platform and took the almost hysterical child into his arms.

"Hello, Tiddlywinks!" he sang out jovially. "Having a good time at the carnival? Listen, kiddie! I'm going to give you a real treat! Yessir! You know what you're going to do? Just guess!"

Sally felt the blood begin to thaw in her frozen veins. Gus was standing by. Dear Gus! But Gus was too wise to give the child in his arms a chance to reply. He hurried on, his voice loud and cajoling:

"I'm going to let you stand right up on the platform with the little lady midget—her name's 'Pitty Sing'—and show all the other kids how much bigger you are than a grown-up lady. Yessir, she's a grown-up lady and she's not nearly as big as you. Now what do you think of that?"

Betsey was torn between her love for Sally, whom she was convinced she had found, and her pride in being chosen to stand beside the mid-get. She looked doubtfully from Sally, whose eyes beneath the black lace veil were lowered to her tightly locked hands, to the platform opposite, where "Pitty Sing," the midget, was stretching out a tiny hand invitingly. The midget won, for the moment at least.

"I'm six going on seven, and I'm a big girl," she confided to the Barker on whose shoulder she was hiding in delightful conspicuousness.

The children, true to the herd instinct which had been so highly developed in the orphanage, trooped after Gus and Betsey, even more easily diverted than she from their poy-eyed inspection of "Princess Lalla."

Sally heard Thelma answer another child derisively: "Aw, Betsey's off her nut! Sure that ain't Sally! That's a Turkish princess from Constantinople. The man said so. 'Sides, Sally's white, and the princess is brown—"

"All right, children, right this way!" Gus was bawling loudly. "Permit me to introduce 'Pitty Sing,' the smallest and prettiest little woman in the world. Just 29 inches tall, 29 years old and 29 pounds heavy. Did I say 'heavy'? Excuse me, Pitty Sing! I meant 29 pounds light! Look at her, little ladies and gents! Ain't she cute? Her parents were just as big as your papas and mamas—"

He remembered just too late that he was talking to orphans, and his jolly face went dark red. But he recovered quickly, glanced about his audience, saw that Miss Pond was straying nervously toward Sally's platform, as if halfway convinced that Betsey's childish intuition had been correct.

"Oh, Miss Pond!" he sang out ingratiatingly. "I wonder if you'd do me the favor to step up on the platform. I believe Betsey is scared. Yessir, I believe she's scared half out of her skin!" He laughed, stooped to chuck Betsey under the chin, then, with a courtly gesture, offered Miss Pond his hand.

Sally looked on, her throat tight with fear and with tears of gratitude toward Gus, as the Barker, with a rapid fire of talk and joking, kept his audience completely hypnotized. He jollied shy little Betsey into taking the midget into her arms, like a baby or a big doll, and only Sally, of all those who looked on, could guess how keenly the artificially smiling little atom of humanity was resenting this insult to her dignity.

He coaxed the flattered and flustered Miss Pond into standing beside "Pitty Sing," so that the children could see what a vast difference there was in their height. And somehow he had attracted the attention of a carnival employee, for before he had exhausted the possibilities of the midget as a diversion, Winfield Bybee himself came striding into the Palace of Wonders, mounted the midget's platform and, after a moment's whispered conference with Gus, made an announcement:

"Children, I'm old Pop Bybee; Winfield Bybee is the way it's wrote down in the Bible. I own this carnival and I want to tell you children that she was safe from be-

get. She looked doubtfully from Sally, whose eyes beneath the black lace veil were lowered to her tightly locked hands, to the platform opposite, where "Pitty Sing," the midget, was stretching out a tiny hand invitingly. The midget won, for the moment at least.

Watching the Big Scoreboard

(BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Frankie Frisch, Cardinals' second baseman, who was the fielding sensation in the major leagues last season, threatens to distract some of the batting laurels from Messrs. Ruth, Gehrig, et al. in the present pennant races.

The former Giants' star hit his third home run yesterday which aided in the St. Louis victory over the Cubs by 4 to 3. Frisch also cracked a triple with one aboard in the seventh.

In the four games played thus far, Frisch has hit safely nine times in 14 trips to the plate. Pitcher Sherdel stopped the Cubs with six hits, one of which was a homer by Gabby Hartnett. Sherdel also contributed a circuit smash.

Pittsburgh broke into the winning ranks for the first time of the 1928 campaign, the Reds falling victims by 3 to 2.

At New York the Giants rapped three Philadelphia twirlers for 12 hits to hang up an 8 to 1 decision. Frank O'Doul had a big day with the McGrawmen, blazing out with a pair of doubles and a homer. Andy Cohen and Jackson belted for the route as well.

Brooklyn dropped Rogers Hornsby and the Braves by 3 to 2. Southpaw Clark of Terre Haute shading Dutch Brandt, recruit from the Pacific Coast, in a pitchers' battle.

Fans are remembering the advice of President Bernard of the American League: "Watch the Browns." Sam Gray stopped the White Sox with six scattered hits while St. Louis galloped off with their fourth straight 4 to 1.

Through some sparkling pitching from Josh Billings, Detroit took the Indians into camp, 8 to 2.

Goose Goslin featured the Washington triumph over the Red Sox, 6 to 5, by hitting a home run in the third inning with two runners on the paths.

New York National Soccer Team Champs

Chicago, April 16—(AP)—Charles Stoneham's New York Nationals are the professional soccer champions of the United States.

They won the title and the National Challenge title that goes with it on Soldiers Field yesterday by defeating the western champions, the Chicago Bricklayers, 3 to 0, in a game marked with fist fights, numerous personal fouls and police interference. Twenty thousand persons watched the duel.

It was the second titanic match between the two rivals—the first ended in a one-all tie at New York a week ago—and one of the roughest soccer games ever played in Chicago. Two players, Millar, inside left for New York, and Scott, right back for the Brickies, were banished for fist fighting; Cutts, Brickie center, sprained an ankle in a melee and had to be carried from the field; and MacLean, Chicago outside right, was kicked in the mouth and had to retire.

Collinsville, Ill., April 16—(AP)—Sectional rivalry between eastern and western owners looms in the third renewal of the annual Fairmount Derby here June 2, with 129 outstanding 3-year-olds of the country nominated.

Some of the outstanding horses nominated include:

SPORT SLANTS

BY ALLAN J. GOULD

Associated Press Sports Editor
New York, April 16—(AP)—The bearish movement in Chicago Cup stock that followed the injury to Home-run Hack Wilson has been checked by the sensational return to left-handed pitching form of Arthur Nehf.

If the veteran southpaw's exhibition in blanking Cincinnati is any criterion of what may be expected from him this season the Cubs won't have many pitching worries. They already have a sharpshooting corps of right-handers, led by Charles Root.

Nehf was a big factor in McGraw's pennant triumphs with the Giants a few years ago after he had been purchased from the Boston Braves for around $55,000.

Three years ago Art's arm went back on him and he was shipped to Cincinnati in 1926.

He was unconditionally released last year and the Cubs, desperately in need of pitching help, signed the veteran last September. But his record for the last two years shows a grand total of only four victories and seven defeats.

Ever since they sold Alexander "down the river" the Cubs have been badly in need of an old pitching hand or two for rough pennant weather. Nehf will fill the gap nicely if he keeps on coming back.

Since such stars as Rube Marquard, Nap Rucker, Wilbur Cooper, Jim Vaughn, Hooks Wiltse, Nehf and Rixey have either passed out of the picture completely, or at least passed their prime, the national league's left-handed talent hasn't been much to write home about.

The older circuit hasn't produced any portenders in recent years to match the American League crop that includes such aces as Herb Pennock, Mose Grove, Babe Wabberg, Joe Shaute, Tom Zachary, Earl Whitehill and some up and coming youngsters. This group has been carrying on where Rube Waddell and Eddie Plank left off.

The Pirates won the National League flag last year without a southpaw on their roster worth mentioning and are working under the same handicap this season.

The most widely ballyhooped minor league club in the minors this year, the Newark Internationals, will start their season Wednesday without their manager and biggest drawing card—"Old Barney" Johnson. The former Washington veteran is still on the hospital list. Optimistic hopes are held out that he will be able at least to sit on the bench by May. It is unlikely Sir Walter will be in condition to pitch at all this year.

Meanwhile Johnson's old Washington club-mate, George McBride, is handling the managerial helm and an imposing array of ex-big leaguers, among them McQuillan, Lutzke, Bentley and Fournier, will start the pennant quest.

Runners Near Half Way Mark in Tulsa

Bristow, Okla., April 16—(AP)—The seventy odd runners and walkers in the cross country marathon today turned toward Tulsa with the knowledge completion of the 40 mile trek would find approximately half of the distance from Los Angeles to New York covered.

They were aligned for the jaunt to Tulsa under the leadership of Peter Gavuzzi, Southampton, Eng. who covered yesterday's 34.8 miles from Chandler in 4:27:37, to take over first place in elapsed time from Andrew Payne of Claremore, Okla. Ed. Gardner, Seattle negro, who ranks fifth with 301:37:31, finished in a dead heat with Gavuzzi, who has a total of 265:44:05.

Payne arrived from Chandler in 5:29 flat, to drop to second place with 266:07:31, about 23 minutes more than Gavuzzi has used for the 1,375 miles.

Fear Chum's Death May Stop Marriner

Champaign, Ill., April 16—(AP)—Friends of Les Marriner, slugging University of Illinois professional heavyweight boxer, were apprehensive today lest the death of his chum, Fred M. Bobzin, 21 year old Chicago student, would ruin his fighting career.

A Coroner's jury absolved Marriner from blame in connection with the death, deciding Bobzin died from a cerebral hemorrhage.

Layton Beats Hoppe for Billiard Title

Chicago, April 16—(AP)—Titan-haired Johnny Layton of St. Louis was chief of two worlds today—chief of a tribe of northern Minnesota Indians and chief of America's three cushion billiard stars.

His appellation, "Chief Pushacue," was given to him by the Indians with whom he fishes every summer; he won the billiard crown Saturday night by tomahawking the veteran Willie Hoppe of New York, 50 to 37, in 46 innings in the final match of the two weeks national three cushion tournament.

It was the fourth time Layton has taken the title.
